NOT IN THE WEDDING PARTY

BY EUPHEMIA HOLDEN.

Her best man wore his way in and out of the gay throng at the foot of the stairway. Bright colored confetti was scattered about the white shoulders of the bridesmaids and the black coats of the men. The atmosphere vibrated with music and the rustle of gowns.

She walked across the deserted library drawing aside the curtains of a window, stepped into semi-darkness. On the broad window seat a swirl of white stirred and a startled head appeared.

"Oh, I didn't expect to be found," said the maid of honor ungraciously. "Are they nearly ready?"

"Oh, I didn't expect to be found," said the maid of honor ungraciously.

"You heard he was engaged to another girl you congratulated him heartily and honestly. Just the same when they were married, you felt a trifle sad and a trifle lonely. Not because you wanted anything changed, merely because it was another chapter closed forever."

"How do you know?" she cried, sitting up straight.

He laughed the low, pleased laugh of a flattered man.

"It's the way I feel about Elsa," he said.

"And the way I feel about Ralph," she gasped.

In the silence they could hear the talk and laughter of the wedding guests.

"And yet," she began.

"And yet," he interrupted. "They are the happy ones. They have found each other."

"And they will be peaceful and contented because real love never analyzes."

"While the left-overs—you and I—are sitting in the dark, tired, lonesome, theoretical, yet so hard-hearted we wouldn't change."

"Oh, don't," she said sadly. "Just think of the fairy kingdom that belongs to them, all full of romance and fun and companionship. Critical eyes will never see their treasure."

The best man was surprised to hear her catch her breath. He had not connected sentiment with the merry maid of honor, not having realized that a sharp tongue may give utterance to sympathy and gentleness. The discovery opened new vistas to him.

"But not a treasure we should be blind to if we forced our eyes open," she shook her head dubiously.

"There's no hope for the analytical. They may peep at a gentle afterglow. One needs to be very young and very rash to find what Elsa and Ralph have found."

"You think it's out of the question for us?"

You've asked two personal questions, the third is counterfeited. I merely meant to speculate. Come! We must go, we'll miss them."

"But if we stay," he said quickly, "we may find worlds. Think of the time we've wasted sparring, and now—the last night—we find mutual and human sympathies."

The maid of honor leaned back on the cushions smiling. The best man's enthusiasm was new and curious.

"It seems to me," he went on with boyish eagerness, "that reason, honesty and unselfishness are the bases of an enduring marriage. That's why Ralph and Elsa will be happy."

"Oh, you're not a cynic," exclaimed the maid of honor. "It was only a pose to cover what you try to be ashamed of."

He laughed and his face flushed again.

"Do you know," he added softly, "nothing in the world is more alluring than the thought that some one will stand by you year after year, who will put up with your foolishness; a lovable, true friend, who will be your playmate for ever and ever?"

"That's it!" he cried. "We're discoverers. Don't you see that you and I could quarrel and make up and be happy?"

A babel of voices, excited laughter and a scurry of feet interrupted him.

"Quick!" said the maid of honor, springing up. She opened the curtains and hurried out.

"They're gone," she pouted coming slowly back.

"I'm so sorry," apologized the best man skillfully drawing the curtains behind her. "I ought to have—"

"Indeed you ought not," she averred severely.

"Forgive me. We would, have caught only a glimpse of them, and these minutes in here have meant—"

"Oh, no, no," she faltered. "They mean nothing. Weddings are contagious. These are symptoms."

"And the cure?" she laughed.

"Immediate separation."

"Twenty minutes too late," he cried joyously. "Let's have another wedding."

"New York, and the reception at the Utah Independent Telephone company's new building, which promises to be a most enjoyable event."

Mrs. E. B. Bailey and daughter, Miss Helen, will spend the next few weeks in California.

Kimball, parents of the groom, and Miss Irma Lake, Punch was served on the porch by Miss Lora Schoppe and Miss Helen Burton, while assisting in the dining-room were the Misses Jessie Davis, Zeta Morris, Helen Halm and Ethel Shepard. Mr. and Mrs. Kimball will be at home to their friends, after July 15, at 29 Canyon road.

Louis McCormick entertained informally at dinner last evening in honor of Mr. Livermore, who is a guest of Mr. Newhouse.

A delightfully informal afternoon was spent by the ladies of St. Mark's guild and a number of their friends yesterday at the home of Mrs. Windsor V. Rice. A quantity of wild flowers were used in beautifying the rooms, yellow and white being the colors of the parlor and blue and white in the dining-room. Rugs and cushions made the veranda inviting, and here much of the afternoon was passed. The entertainment was for the benefit of the carpet fund of the cathedral and quite a goodly sum was realized. Mrs. Rice was assisted by the members of the guild in serving refreshments.

The marriage of Miss Ollie V. Myers and William E. Schuler takes place this evening at the home of the bride's father, Owen H. Myers.

A pretty home wedding of last evening was that of Miss Barbara Jacobson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Jacobson, and Louis Enberg. The bride's father performing the ceremony at their home. Following the ceremony a reception was held, attended by about 150 relatives and friends. Assisting in receiving the guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Jacobson, Mrs. James Evans and Mrs. R. J. Jarvis. A wealth of garden flowers were used in the pretty decorations of the home. Mr. and Mrs. Enberg will be at home to their friends, after July 5, at 64 East Second South street.

SOCIETY

Miss Jasmine Young and Le Grand Young, Jr., entertain very informally at their home tomorrow evening in honor of Miss Inez Treat.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Munroe and Miss Ethel Munroe of Pittsburgh, Pa., arrived in the city yesterday and will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. Lincoln Boggs of the summer. Mrs. Boggs is a daughter of Col. and Mrs. Munroe.

The Misses Cosgriff give a tally-ho party this evening for twenty-four, followed by a supper at the Country club.

Mrs. M. R. White returned yesterday from a month's visit in Kansas City and St. Louis.

Another of the season's beautiful home weddings was that of Miss Edith M. Lowther and Elliott Tilton Kimball, solemnized last evening by the Rev. Dr. J. P. at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lowther. Only members of the immediate families witnessed the ceremony, but later a reception was held, when more than 200 guests called. The home was attractively decorated in honor of the event, the hall being decorated with pink and green, and the dining room with pink and white. The bride's parlor in green, with white, the bride's parlor in green, with white, the bride's parlor in green, with white.

All about were vases of the roses and white carnations, with smilax festooning the windows and doors. In the dining-room pink and green were carried out in the decorations. From the center of the chandelier was suspended a large bowl of the same flowers. To the corners of the table from the chandelier were ropes of smilax, with pink and white ribbon at each corner, pink-shaded candles lighting the table. An orchestra stationed in the dining-room, as the bride's party entered the parlor, and the wedding march by Mendelssohn at the close of the service. The bride, who wore a lovely gown of white with a chine with yoke and hertha of white lace, was attended by Miss Mabel White, organist with trimmings of pink, white and green. The bride's parlor in green, with white, the bride's parlor in green, with white.

Mr. and Mrs. Max H. Brummer and sons of New York city are visiting relatives here for a few days.

Mrs. J. C. McClain will be hostess at a luncheon today in honor of her sister, Mrs. Thompson.

Mrs. George V. Wallace will entertain a few friends at cards this afternoon at her home.

Harold Orlov will arrive in the city next week from Detroit and will spend the summer months with his parents.

Mrs. Charles G. Plummer entertained a dozen friends at Laguna Tuesday afternoon in honor of her guest, Mrs. Coates of London.

Members of the Pan-Hellenic society will have an outing at Saltair this afternoon.

Mrs. J. S. Lakin of Palo Alto, Cal., is in the city, a guest of Mrs. H. W. Brown for a week.
